NEW YORK, April 8, 2014 – On this Equal Pay Day, the Center for Talent Innovation (CTI) is hopeful that discussions around the Paycheck Fairness Act will shed much needed light on the gender equality issues in our workplaces and in society. Government can impact these inequalities but the private sector also has a critical role to play.

We, together with our growing Task Force of global companies, are committed to developing research and creating best practices that address the challenges and barriers faced by women in the workplace. We realize that the success of our nation is dependent upon the ability of companies to fully realize the talents of all of their people across lines of gender, race and other forms of difference. That includes providing equal pay for equal work.

To arrange an interview with CTI founder and president, Sylvia Hewlett, please contact Silvia Marte at smarte@talentinnovation.org.

About the Center for Talent Innovation
The Center for Talent Innovation is a nonprofit think tank based in New York City. CTI’s flagship project is the Task Force for Talent Innovation—a private-sector task force focused on helping organizations leverage their talent across the divides of gender, generation, geography and culture. The 80+ global corporations and organizations that constitute the Task Force, representing nearly six million employees and operating in 192 countries around the world, are united by an understanding that the full realization of the talent pool is at the heart of competitive advantage and economic success.

###